What is Cystic Fibrosis?

Cystic Fibrosis is a non contagious disease that children have since they are born, that is to say, a genetic one, but it can demonstrate sooner or later after birth. It is calculated that 1 out of 20 people is a healthy carrier of the gene that causes CF and that 1 out of 3.200 children born alive in the Balearics has CF. This data means that CF is the genetic serious disease more frequent in the Caucasian white race. Nowadays it has no cure.

How does it demonstrate?

It affects to all the organs of the body that produce secretions (respiratory, digestive and reproductive). These secretions become so thick and sticky, that they can block the conducts and create infection focuses that will make difficult very important functions like breathing and digestion. First demonstration could be a very salted sweat, oily and odorous excreta, lack of weight, etc.

What is the treatment?

The three basic pillars for the treatment of CF are the antibiotics, the nutrition and chest therapy, without forgetting the importance of practicing sport to help the maintenance of a good physical form. The definite cure will be a reality in a short future thanks to the genetic investigation.

What is the Cystic Fibrosis Balearic Association?

It is a group of people that, since 1989, fight to achieve a better quality of life for the children with CF and to spread the knowledge of this serious disease to the society.
